A Path well Traveled

Condors goaltender Josh Tordjman has a wealth of experience between the pipes. From his four-year career in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League to his two games with the NHL's Phoenix Coyotes, Tordjman has been pursuing his dream of being an NHL goaltender. The hard work is paying off so far for Bakersfield.

Tordjman has helped spring the Condors onto their current hot streak, and has helped Bakersfield get back in reach of first place in the Pacific Division. Back-to-back ECHL Goaltender of the Week honors went right along with that. Tordjman has been a consistent face on team that has seen many players come in and out of the lineup.

He knows his time in the AHL has helped him reach this level of play. "I think I learned a lot of my four years I've had so far as a pro. There are a lot of ups and downs, but you try to build your career off of those individually and as well as a team."

The Condors have been no strangers to those hills and valleys. The team started the year with five different players spending time on the 21-day IR, and numerous lineup changes. "We've matured since certain segments of the season. We learned a lot, and it didn't matter who we had in and out of the lineups."

But it hasn't been all smooth sailing for the 25 year old netminder. He was hit with a 6-game league suspension in the middle of November, and had to fight off the rust when he was allowed to return to the lineup. "When you come back that first day, it's all about timing. You have to be patient with it. If you get too frustrated things won't work out for you," said Tordjman. "Those first three games back, I wasn't at my best but you have to refocus."

A little known fact about Tordjman is his interest in psychology. He mentioned that is might be a possible career path for him once hockey is done. "It is something that I have wanted to study for a while, and I know it takes a lot of time," he said. "I think school is something that I wasn't 100 percent focused on during juniors. After my career, it is something I would like to focus on."

Don't expect to sit down in Dr. Tordjman's psychology clinic too soon, though. He has aspirations to get back the NHL, "It's been a little while since I got the opportunity," Tordjman stated. "It's something that you work your entire life for, and I think everyone is in the same boat when we say that we would do anything to get back there. It was a great experience."

And what of his immediate plans? "For now, I'm just going to keep working hard, and I hope to get another shot in the next few years."
