Derlago Bobbleheads in Condorstown

It is a rare honor to be immortalized in a statue of one's likeness, and an even rarer honor if that statue happens to be about seven inches tall with a spring for a neck. The bobblehead craze is something that has swept through the United States over the last couple of decades, and pertains in particular to revering our favorite athletes – after all, they don't make bobbleheads for just anyone!

The daunting criteria required for an athlete to have a bobblehead made of him/her has held true in Condorstown throughout the years. This is evidenced by the select few Condors who have had the fortune to have themselves miniaturized in the form of a bobblehead – Jamie Cooke, Paul Rosebush, Paul Willett, Kevin St. Pierre, Jason Ralph, Quinn Fair, Connor James, Kevin St. Jacques, Todd Griffith, Colonel Claw'd, Yutaka Fukufuji and now 2009 ECHL All-Star Mark Derlago. Being the most recent to join this prestigious list, Nightly Notes caught up with Derlago to get his thoughts on the matter...

Nightly Notes: "Bobblehead dolls continue to grow increasingly popular and are definitely one of the most looked-forward-to promotions around the sports world and in Condorstown more specifically, how does it feel to have one made of yourself?"

Mark Derlago: "It's definitely cool to have a bobblehead of myself. I think it's pretty funny. Everyone back home thinks it's funny that I have a bobblehead too – they all want one."

NN: "How close do you think the resemblance is between you and your bobblehead?"

Derlago: "Well, guys on the team all joke around and say that it looks like an old Luke Perry (the actor from Beverly Hills 90210) bobblehead that had its hair painted red, but I think it looks pretty good. I like the goatee."

NN: "One of your bobbleheads hopped out of its box and made a video on Condors.TV. Have you seen it?"

Derlago: "I've watched the video, but I didn't have speakers hooked up to the computer, so I'm going to have to watch it again. Everyone tells me that it's really funny – my dad really got a kick out of it."

To view the video of the talking bobblehead, visit www.condors.tv. Nightly Notes also caught up with the video's mastermind, Condors Director of Marketing Scott Frasnelly, to find out exactly how it all came to be...

Frasnelly: "We had one of the bobbleheads around to check it out and see how it looked, and then started testing out the camera as well. Before we knew it, the bobblehead was talking into the camera, so naturally we started asking it some questions. We thought it was pretty amazing, so we posted it on Condors.TV to share with the world. It was really insistent on me looking into its eyes for some reason..."

While you cherish your Mark Derlago Bobblehead, start getting ready for the next Condors Bobblehead Giveaway, coming up on Friday, March 20, and be sure to check Bakersfieldcondors.com in the coming weeks to find out who will be the next lucky Condor to be immortalized in such a unique, and always agreeable, manner.
