The new guy is an award winner

The Condors added a new player to the roster on Monday, signing G Jerad Kaufmann, who recently completed his college career at the University of Nebraska-Omaha. But not only did they have to wait for the Roseville, Minnesota, native to wrap up his participation in the CCHA tournament, but also to wait for Jerad to attend the annual CCHA awards banquet last Thursday.

That's right, Jerad had an award to accept – the Illitch Humanitarian Award. Named after the owner of the Detroit Red Wings (and also Little Caesar's Pizza chain) owner, it recognizes a player in the conference that showed the most dedication to the community. Jerad drew a lot of attention for his team's Military Appreciation Night, which he organized.

"I started it my junior year and turned it into an annual thing," he says. "A friend of mine lost his life in Iraq, that was December 2nd, 2006, and when I heard about that it was pretty shocking. So my way to pay tribute to him and thank our soldiers was to start that night.

"I had special camouflage jerseys made up and we wore them in the game and did a silent auction after that. All the money went to the Brian McDonough Military Heroes foundation and Nebraska Troop Support."

Brian was his friend that he went to school with growing up in Roseville, Minnesota, while the other organization is based out of O'Neill, Nebraska – a way for him to honor troops back at home as well as at school. The event has brought in over $25,000 since he started it.

Jerad also participated in Big Brothers Big Sisters while in school. "I have a little Omaha brother, his name is JyAire. We'd hang out a few times every month – just go to a movie or to dinner or something. It's been a lot of fun."

It is work like that that draws the attention of those picking the awards, and Jerad says he was honored to be recognized. "The banquet was unbelievable; they put on a really good show. It was at the Fox Theatre in Detroit. It was the first year they ever gave the award to two players – me and another senior goalie, Jeff Lerg out of Michigan State. I have a tremendous amount of respect for him; he's done a lot of great work."

So that's the new guy for you. He should fit right in here in Condorstown.
